

SZECHENVIS WILL SAIL FOR EUROPE ON TUESDAY WEEK

Amidships Suite Engaged on Kaiser Wilhelm II.—Relations Will Accompany.

PINKERTONS ON GUARD.

Detectives Watch Wedding
Gifts Worth $1,000,000 at Vanderbilt Home.

Through an agent of the Vanderbilt family who had a part in engaging the passage it was learned to-day that Count Szechenyi and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, who are to be married next Monday will sail on their honeymoon for Europe on Feb. 4. A suite of rooms amidships on the North German-Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. has been retained for their use.

The original intention was to engage the Imperial suite on this steamer, but inasmuch as these apartments are forward, and rough weather is almost sure to be encountered, the rooms amidships were deemed more suitable. Other rooms have been engaged for some of the relatives of the Count, who will return to Europe on the same steamer and for maids and valets.

Pinkerton detectives have been engaged to guard the $1,000,000 worth of wedding gifts in the Vanderbilt mansion at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue until after the wedding. These gifts will be stationed inside and outside the house.

A private view of the presents was accorded to privileged friends of the family to-day, but no list was given out, and the chances are that such a list will not be issued.

The party which came from the Count's home in Hungary to attend the nuptials yesterday went to Niagara Falls to spend the week end. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt sent the noblemen his private car, Wayfarer. Niagara Falls was one of the wonders of this country and the greatest in the eyes of the visitors, which they expressed a wish to see.

It was said yesterday that in all likelihood Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will not be among the guests at the wedding, because of the disappointed report that invitations for four hundred guests would be issued. Mrs. Vanderbilt has declined definitely on but such that cannot be confirmed.

An exhibition of the wedding gowns and the costumes of the bridesmaids will take place today in the establishment in West Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth streets, where the Vanderbilt family for a long time has had all its work done. A number of the gowns, which were imported from Paris, require retinting.

MARKO MAKES LOVE WITH GUN, THEY SAY

His Arrest Follows Three Pistol Shots at Miss Rosina De Mattia.

Giovanni De Mattia, a Mr. Vernon baker, has his own plans about how to win a bride. Thus far they have proved decidedly ineffective in operation, having earned him nothing better than a lodging in jail on a charge of felonious assault.

Giovanni is in love with Rosina De Mattia, the pretty daughter of a wealthy politician living at No. 63 East Two Hundred and Fourteenth street, Williamsburgh. In this he is not alone. Nicola Carabianco, a detective in the Bronx bureau of the Central office, also loves Rosina, and Rosina does not love either.

Because of his ardent disposition Giovanni was forbidden some weeks ago to visit the De Mattia home. He then sent word to Rosina that if she would not marry him she would never marry anybody else, for it was his purpose to so alter her features with a sharp knife that no man would even look at her thereafter. Since that time Rosina has remained in the house, except when she had Nicola Carabianco as her escort. Last night she happened to look out the window of the room of her home and saw Giovanni across the street.

He motioned to her and she withdrew from the window. About an hour later as she was passing through the hall on the lower floor under a gas light some one on the outside fired three shots at her through the glass panel of the front door.

The bullets struck just her head and imbedded themselves in a wall. Her father, hearing the shots, ran from the house, but there was no one in sight. Rosina telephoned the news to her cousin, but he was busy on another case. He turned the matter over to Detectives Repetti and Gallo, and they went to Mr. Vernon to look up Giovanni. They found him at his home and in a bureau drawer in his room they discovered a revolver with three empty chambers. Magistrate House in Morrisania Police Court today held him in $1,500 bail for further examination.

Thaw Jury's Verdict Not Yet Foreshadowed by Any Act in Court of the Phlegmatic Twelve

That Body Listened Dry-Eyed to Tale Which Moved Most of Those on First Jury to Tears.

EXPERTS ON INSANITY
NOW TO HAVE AN INNING

As Case Stands Prosecution Hardly Can Expect Unqualified Conviction, Nor Defense an Unqualified Acquittal.

By Nicola Greeley-Smith.

Mrs. William Thaw has told the story of Harry Thaw's childhood. The gray-haired mother of the defendant has passed with the brown-haired Evelyn from the case.

Anthony Comstock has testified as to Thaw's various visits to the office of his society in the hope of bringing to justice the real or fancied criminals of whom he conceived Stanford White to be the chief.

With the placing on the stand of Dr. Wagner, one of the experts for the defense, it begins to appear as if all but the medical reasons for Harry Thaw's insanity on the night of June 25, 1906, had been given.

The elder Mrs. Thaw told, as it has often been hinted she would, of finding a dead child in bed with her some twelve months before Harry Thaw was born. The ensuing nervousness and sleeplessness induced by the shock lasted for seven months, and its effects showed in the poor nerves and wakeful vigils of the puny child that developed into the man now on trial for his life.

JEROME MORE CONSIDERATE OF MOTHER.

Mr. Jerome did not cross-examine the elder Mrs. Thaw. There could not be a greater contrast than that shown by his consideration for the older woman and his attitude toward Evelyn Thaw, whom for nearly two court days he had endeavored mercilessly to browbeat and discredit before the jury.

If one may judge by appearances, the second Thaw jury is more phlegmatic than the first. For, although Evelyn Thaw's second story of her ruin at the hands of Stanford White lacked the power and pathos of her first tenor recital, it still possessed sufficient dramatic value to move persons who had not heard it before. Yet not a tear fell in that second jury box, though among the first twelve men who heard the story nearly every face was darkly flushed with excitement, and the eyes of several were filled with tears.

IMPOSSIBLE TO FORECAST JURY'S ACTION.

Yet the first jury declared, after its failure to agree, that it absolutely set aside Evelyn Thaw's evidence and considered the remaining facts as if she had never mounted the witness-stand.

What the second will do is written on the leaves of the future still unturned. I doubt if even Mr. Jerome expects an unqualified conviction from them. And it is possible the defense has no greater hope of an unqualified acquittal.

Whatever verdict they may reach, I do not envy these twelve men their task. Unless the jury believes that Thaw is insane within the definition of the statute, it would require twelve sentimentalists to acquit him. And it is not possible that among twelve men, the majority of whom are fifty years old, and married, all are sentimentalists. Nor is it any more conceivable that the twelve are all such intense devotees of law and order as to vote unanimously to convict.

POSITION OF THE TWELVE UNENVIABLE.

No matter how stale the Thaw trial may seem to the public, or to its chroniclers, it gets a relentless grip on its jurors. Former Juror Harney, who was one of the five who voted to acquit at the last trial, and who was in court during an afternoon session last week, showed as much interest in the proceedings as if he were still one of Harry Thaw's judges—and he looks far happier than any of the twelve men in the box.

I would rather be any other man in New York than one of these twelve who must so soon speak with the voice of fate to Harry Thaw.

In line with the jury-box at the end of the court-room is a painted panel of the three Fates. In it the withered Severer of the thread of life sits with poised scissors waiting.

And she waits on that jury's word.

EARTHQUAKE IN CALABRIA BRINGS TERROR TO MANY

Four Villages Shaken and People Gathered in Fields Fearful of New Shock.

REGGIO DI CALABRIA, Jan. 23.—A strong earthquake shook this province to-day. The inhabitants, recalling the devastation wrought by the earthquake of last October, were thrown into a panic. Up to the present time no report of loss of life has been received. The shocks were particularly severe at the villages of Bianco, Brancalonne, Bruzzano and Ferruzzano.

The terrified people rushed from their houses to the open fields, or took refuge in the nearby subterranean grottoes. A repetition of the shock is feared at any moment.

SAY HE SOLD FARM THAT HE DIDN'T OWN

Officers Will Take Hansen Back to Oregon to Answer to Charge.

Upon advice from Salem, Ore., that Hans E. Hansen had sold a farm at that place and sold it last June, Lieut. Detective Michael Galvin arrested the man at the Stevens House to-day, and he was held for extradition.

Hansen was employed as caretaker on a farm near Salem until June 8 last. Then, while his employer was in San Francisco, he married and sold out everything of value on the farm—live stock, farming implements and even the farmhouse. He got in payment $800 and brought his bride to this city.

He deserted her after a few weeks and went back to Norway. When his money gave out over there he came back to New York and obtained employment as a porter at the Stevens House. He wrote from there to a friend in Salem, Oregon, who informed Sheriff W. J. Colver of his whereabouts. Inspector McCafferty got a telegram from Sheriff Colver on Tuesday and the man was located to-day. He said he would be glad to get back to Oregon even if he had to go to jail there.

Nature's good, healthy, red blood will cure most any disease.

Coffee, in many people, destroys the red corpuscles and impoverishes the blood. A definite change is made by leaving off coffee entirely and using well boiled, delicious Postum in its place. You can prove this by trial. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

PUFFS HER DEFENSE TO "LITTLE TIM" ON THE BOWERY

Kate Mullahy Lights Up and Burns Holes in That Anti-Smoke Law.

"Little Tim" Sullivan and his law against women smoking in public places were defied early to-day by a woman who declares that never shall men deprive her of her right to puff a cigarette.

She was arrested and fined in the Night Court and sent to a cell. But she took her cigarettes and a plentiful supply of matches with her.

She is Kate Mullahy, and she started out to show Sullivan and the Board of Aldermen what a determined woman can do. She went right into "Little Tim's" ballroom, too, lighted up, marched up and down the Bowery, blew rings right and left, and was soon followed by a crowd of admirers, who cheered her defiance of the law and told her she ought to run for office on a woman's rights platform with a smoking pipe as wide as a turnpike in it.

The policeman Stern, of the Eldridge street station, was sauntering up the Bowery near Division street a little after 1 o'clock when he saw smoke issuing from Miss Mullahy's lips. She had just struck a match on a wall and held it before her face. Stern ran toward her. Even then she was the centre of a crowd, and more were coming.

"Don't you know," said Stern, "that it's against the law of 'Little Tim' for you to smoke in public?"

Wanted to Defy Tim.

"Sure I know," she replied, "and that's what I am doing it for. Think I'll let a job lot of Aldermen make rules for me? Ain't I got as much right as any man to smoke?"

Walking close to the policeman she puffed away till the cigarette was burning briskly and then blew a blast in his face. The crowd roared with laughter. Stern gasped for breath.

"I see 'Little Tim's' fault," she shouted. "The idea of Tim Sullivan interfering with the habits of a lady! He'd better let us alone, he had. He may be a good politician when he's bossing men, but he's on a trail now that'll lead to a bear's den."

Policeman Stern, knowing his duty and anxious to do it, told her he would have to arrest her.

"Don't you care," she said, again blowing the smoke at him and preparing to light a fresh cigarette. "I've smoked a lot of 'em already. I've been all over claims of Sellick's Cousins Have Tied Up $23,000, Which Destitute Persons Need.

Mrs. Edwinna Murdoch, of No. 36 Perry street, Brooklyn, the aged aunt who took the place of mother to orphaned Alfred A. Sellick, who became a policeman, has been persuaded that she is entitled to half the benefit money raised for "the families" of the two policemen—Sellick and George M. Sechler—who were shot to death by Salvatore Gonnelli on April 1 last.

The fund amounted to $23,000, and was turned over to Inspector Walsh as trustee.

Sellick was a bachelor, but Sechler left a young wife and babe, practically destitute. Inspector Walsh was begged by cousins of Sellick, who claimed the half intended for his "family."

Justice Newburger granted to-day an order for the examination of Inspector Walsh on Monday regarding the amount of the fund, how and by whom and from whom it was raised. This will be followed by the examination of the donors as to their purpose.

SEA SEARCH FOR 28 ADRIFT IN AN OPEN BOAT

No Trace of Passengers Who Left Steamer Amsterdam After Collision.

HOCK OF HOLLAND, Jan. 23.—No news has yet been received of the missing boat from the steamer Amsterdam, one of several that put off from that vessel after the collision Tuesday night with the steamer Axminster. It is believed that this boat has been carried south by the currents and that she will make a landing somewhere on the coast. A general search is being made for her.

The heavy fog, which still continues, has interfered with the search for the missing craft, but all the vessels anchored in the fairway have been visited and not one had heard of her.

The boat carries twenty-eight persons, of which twenty-one are passengers. She is said to be well provisioned.

At the time of the collision the Amsterdam was coming from Harwich with fifty-six passengers on board. All the other passengers and crew were transferred safely to the Axminster. The Amsterdam was beached.
